

ANNOUNCING OUR NEW PRINTING AND PHOTO FINISHING FORUM!

Printing your own photos is the last step in a photographer's creative process, but sometimes it can be a struggle to get the colors right, have detail in the whites or darks, or have the print look as sharp as you know it can be.

From determining the right printer for you or for questions on color management, to troubleshooting printing issues or investigating papers and inks, we welcome you to peruse the information or post a topic of your own in our new Printing and Photo Finishing Forum.

With this new forum we'd also like to introduce Eric Chan as a forum moderator. Be sure to check out his feature article in this month's issue, Getting Started With Inkjet Printing, a great resource for basic information on:

- Choosing an inkjet printer and paper
- Color management (calibrating and profiling your display and printer)
- Setting up your RGB working space in Photoshop
- Soft-proofing
- Resizing and sharpening your images for output
- Printing with printer profiles

At NatureScapes.Net we work hard to be a resource for nature photographers and hope you find this new forum valuable in your printing endeavors!

Feel free to send your comments on this announcement to the editors at NatureScapes.Net.
